By Frank J. Prial New York Times Service

PARIS — France recalled its ambassistion to South Africa on Wednesday and suspended all new investment in a protest against the imposition of a state of emergency there. The number of arrests in the crackdown has risen to more than

The punitive measures, an-nomiced by Prime Minister Lanrent Fabius, are the most serious taken against South Africa by a Westein country since the state of emergency went into effect Sunday.

There was no immediate comment on the move by the South African government.

Mr. Fabius said that both the freeze on new investment and the recall of Ambassador Pietre Boyer were effective immediately. He said that the two measures had been decided on by the French cabinet at its weekly meeting Wednesday

In May, the Socialist govern-ment reversed a long-standing policy of opposing economic sanc-tions against South Africa. At the time, Mr. Fabius said that investment in the white-ruled nation would be cut within 18 months unless basic respect for human rights improved markedly. Wednesday's action moved up that timetable by almost 16 months.

In his statement, the prime min-ister said: "For all people who sup-port justice and the rights of man, the apartheid regime in South Afri-ca is inadmissible. It institutionalizes racial discrimination; it under-mines the moral and political principles on which our society is Just an hour before Mr. Fabins made his announcement, Claude Estier, president of the foreign af-fairs commission of the National Assembly, called on the government to come up with "concrete measures to express France's abborrence of the methods being used

U.S. Maneuvering Between Israelis, Arabs

By Bernard Gwertzman New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, in attempting to cater simultaneously to the interests of two of its closest friends in the Middle East - Israel and Jordan - is in serious danger of offending both.

The issue is how Palestinians should be included in the peace process, a problem that has been at the heart of the Mideast impasse for

It has never been easy for the United States to maneuver smoothly between Israel and moder-ate Arabs because the Arab and Israeli interests rarely coincide. The current difficulty is more pronounced because the United States is being asked by Jordan to deal with Palestinians cho-sen by Yasser Arafat, the leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, and that has raised serious alarms in Israel.

The immediate question is whether to accept King Hussein's proposal for the United States to meet with a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation, thereby keeping alive the Jordanian leader's peace initiative, or to yield to Israeli assertions that the United States should not sit down with Palestinians but instead press Hussein to

Within the U.S. administration there is sympathy for Hussein and for Prime Minister Shimon Peres of Israel. Secretary of State George P.

To help Mr. Peres, Washington has responded generously to his appeal for $2 billion in additional aid this year. Because of the problems involved, senior administration officials say, the United States must handle the Hussein initiative cautiously.

"We're in no rush," a leading State Depart-ment official said after a meeting between Mr. Shultz and senior Middle East experts headed by Richard W. Murphy, the assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern and South Asian affairs. "We have a lot of studying to do and talking with the players."

Israelis Debate the Politics of Pork Bills to Ban Sales of 'White Steak' Are Sensitive Issue

By Thomas L. Friedman New York Times Service

KIBBUTZ MIZRA, Israel - The manager of Israel's biggest pork factory sits behind his desk wearing a long white butcher's coat and a worried winkle on his brow.

The sign on the wall above him reads: "Promote Pork. Run Over a Chicken." But pig jokes are not appropriate these days, he grumbles. Israel's estimated one million pork-eaters are under siege. Two laws pending before the Knesset, or parliament, would make the sale of pork illegal.

One of the bills is supported by Prime Minister Shimon Peres "I think there are three countries in the world where there are such laws," said the factory manager, Sar-Shalom Eyal. "The first is Libya, the second is Saudi Arabia and in Iran they are trying to push through such a law but haven't yet." Yossi Sarid, a leftist member of parliament from the Citizens Rights Party, said: "I told the Knesset that they are talking about the pork worse than they talk about the PLO. They have presented the pig as a clear and present danger, as if the pigs of the world are attacking Israel and we have to do something about it immediately." "I myself don't eat pork and I never imagined I would be the defender of pigs," he said. "Esthetically, it is not a creature I admire. But if that is what people want to cat, it is their right." in many ways the proposed pig-banning laws touch on some of the most sensitive issues in Israel today: the rise of an increasingly militant religious right; the need by Labor Party politicians, who were once hard-core Socialists, to strike a religious pose in order to court an increasingly traditional electorate, and the role of pork in a Jewish nation.

The pig is forbidden by Jewish dietary laws that is, its meat is nonkosher — because, unlike the cow, it does not chew its cud. Swine are specifically mentioned in the Bible. "Of their flesh shall ye not eat," Leviticus says. "They are unclean to you." The problem today is that many secular Israelis, who make up at least two-thirds of the population, have acquired a taste for bacon, ham, pork ribs, pork salamis and sausages. And they have been consuming them in ever increasing volume.

Kibbutz Mizra, in northern Israel, is the country's biggest pork producer and sells its products to more than 300 butches shops and grocery stores. Its factory employs 70 people and it is one of 20 producers that contribute to 10,000 tons of slaughtered pork a year that Israelis consume.

Because of the weighty historical symbolism of the pig, however, pork-eating in Israel is often discussed in euphemisms. For instance, restaurant menus refer to pork as "white steak." When the spokesman for the Ministry of Agriculture, Naftali Yaniv, was asked how much pork was produced each year, he responded as though he were being asked about cocaine. "I really don't know," he said. "Truthfully, truthfully, truthfully, we don't deal with it. Not for good or bad. I am telling you the absolute truth. I am sorry. Goodbye." The rigorously Orthodox political parties have long been trying to ban pork, Mr. Eyal said, "but it had become a kind of game. How do you call it,

'hide and seek?'" Two things occurred, however, that have led to calling off the game.

First, the Agudat Israel Party, a rigorously Orthodox group led by Rabbi Avraham Shapira, has for years been introducing a law that would make selling pork a crime. The religious see as insufficient a 1962 law that already makes it illegal to raise pigs except in selected districts in predomi-Christian areas remote from centers of Jewish population. Prospects for passage of the ban have now improved because of the current makeup of the cabinet.

The government is a fragile coalition of Israel's two major political blocs, Labor and Likud. Because it could fall apart at any moment — a situation in which each big party would want to form its own coalition with the smaller religious

WASHINGTON -The Reagan administration seriously considered attacking a base in Nicaragua, where it believed Salvadoran guerrillas were trained, according to se-nior administration officials.

The officials, who included State and Defense Departments aides, said Thesday that they believed one or more of the Salvadorans in-volved in the terrorist attack last month in which four U.S. marines and two U.S. civilians were killed had been trained there.

The plan, discussed at senior levels in the White House, would have involved a so-called surgical air strike against one or more training camps that the administration says Nicaragua has set up in the countryside not far from Managna. The officials decided not to carry out the plan but to warn the Nicaraguan government instead of "serious consequences" should the ad-ministration conclude that it was linked to terrorist acts in the future.

Nicaragna has strongly denied that it has either practiced or supported terrorism and has characterzed U.S. support of anti-government rebels as state-sponsored terrorism against Nicaragua. Harry E. Bergold, the U.S. am-bassador to Nicaragua, delivered the American warning to the San-dinist government last Wednesday. A senior official said Tuesday that the administration had "laid down the gauntlet" with that warning by stating that a second situation would be sufficient to warrant a limited U.S. military strike. [Larry Speakes, the chief White House spokesman, said Wednes-day: "We have outlined in firm tones our policy on attacking terrorist centers or those responsible for terrorist attacks," United Press International reported from Washington. "That policy remains. The governments responsible understand that," "We will take appropriate action. The level of our response will be proportionate to the loss incurred, Mr. Speakes said.]

Since last fall the Reagan admin-istration has said that if Nicaragua acquired high-performance fighter planes, like the Soviet MiG-21, the United States would probably order a "surgical" air strike to destroy them. The senior official said the White House had decided that any future Sandinist-inspired terrorist attacks would constitute "another situation like acquiring MiGs."

The term surgical air strike is used to describe a limited attack intended to destroy a specific target and then end without further involvement and with limited civilian casualties. Some administration officials say the Sandinists would almost certainly respond to even a limited attack, perhaps by attack-

For several years, administration officials have contended that the Sandinists maintain secret bases where leftist guerrillas from El Salvador are trained, a charge that Nicaragua has repeatedly denied.
But senior officials who have access to intelligence information about Nicaragua said recent intelligence had led the administration to believe that one or more of the Salvadorans involved in the shooting of the marines in San Salvador on June 19 were trained at one of It was these new reports that inspired the discussions about re-taliation, the officials said. Aides Fail to End Row Over European Fighter

International Herald Tribune PARIS - Five West European defense ministry officials failed at a meeting in Madrid to resolve their protracted dispute over plans for jointly building a new combat plane for the 1990s, participants said Wednesday.

The project, known as the European Fighter Aircraft, is widely regarded as a major test of European cooperation. It could lead to the building of 1,000 aircraft, representing orders of $30 billion.

"Unfortunately, the situation is totally deadlocked, with no viable solutions in sight," said a senior acrospace industry executive in West Germany after the meeting, which examined several compromise proposals. No details on the proposals were disclosed.

If France withdraws from the project, West German officials said, the most likely alternative for Bonn would be to establish a fournation consortium built around the Tornado fighter-bomber organiza-tion. That venture was established by Britain, West Germany and Italy in 1969.

> Las Angeles Times Service

WASHINGTON - The U.S. vernment has decided to drop its 32-month-old labor fraud investigation of Jackie Presser, president of the Teamsters union.

Government sources said Tuesday night that the investigation was being dropped because the Justice Department had concluded that the case lacked "prosecutive merit." The politically sensitive case was developed by Labor Department investigators assigned to a federal strike force in Cleveland.

Ray Maria, the deputy inspector general in the Labor Department who oversees labor racketeering investigations, said, "We have no pending investigation of Jackie Presser." He declined to elaborate.

The decision not to prosecute Mr. Presser came six months after federal prosecutors in Cleveland recommended that he be indicted on charges of authorizing union payments to "ghost employees," or cronies who did no work but appeared on the payroll of Clevela Teamsters Local 507, of which Mr. Presser is secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Presser's reported status as a source of information for the FBI in other investigations was a key impediment to prosecution, sources familiar with the case said. It was also learned that high officials in the Department of Justice had ordered a new inquiry into why the FBI did not tell the department for nearly two years that Mr. Presser had acted as an informant.

Providing information to the FBI does not normally give a person immunity from prosecution. But in Mr. Presser's case, the sources said, FBI officials were concerned that sensitive information about other investigations might be disclosed in the course of rosecuting him. Mr. Presser is President Ronald Reagan's lone political supporter among major American labor leaders. But throughout the unusually long course of the investigation Justice Department officials insisted that politics would play no role in the case.

The decision not to prosecute is certain to be controversial because of Mr. Presser's political connections and because the Instice Department rejected the recommendation of strike force prosecutors. Department officials had sent the investigators back to the field for more work, delaying the case for BONN (Reuters) - Richard R. Burt, the U.S. ambassador-designate to West Germany, charged Wednesday that the Soviet Union's human rights record has worsened over the past decade and said that the United States would use a meeting in Helsinki of foreign ministers from the West and the Soviet bloc to focus on the issue.

Mr. Burt, at at a news conference in Washington relayed to Europe by satellite, said that the United States would accuse Moscow of reneging on its commitments under the 1975 Helsinki accords at next week's gather-ing to mark their 10th anniversary. He also said that Washington would not consider improving ties with the Soviet Union until it took action to

Bush's 2d Brush With Power

He Says He Felt Burden More During Reagan's Surgery

By Gerald M. Boyd New York Times Service WASHINGTON - Vice President George Bush says he felt the burden of responsibility more heavily when President Ronald Reagan underwent cancer surgery, on July 13, than he did when the president was shot in 1981.

In the first interview he has granted since being acting president for eight hours on the day of Mr. Reagan's operation, Mr. Bush said his sense of responsibility was heightened that day by his "more defined" role. Before the surgery Mr. Reagan signed a letter temporarily turning over power to the time to reflect on the situation. He noted that there were fewer "question marks" about the president's health in the most recent surgery, but added, "With the actual transferring of power there was somewhat of a different feeling."

He strongly denied that he had been shunted aside by Donald T. Regan, the White House chief of staff. He said that the most difficult moment of the period was the "un-certainty" when it was unclear how the operation would go or what would be found. That feeling eased, the vice president went on, as the president's doctors began providne encouraging news.

While Mr. Reagan was under an-esthesia and its effects at the Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, Mary-land, the transfer of power made Mr. Bush acting president.

Afghans in Japan Seeking Asylum

The Associated Press TOKYO — Seven Afghanistan nationals have been stranded in a airport hotel here for almost a month because no country has agreed to give them asylum, an international agency official said Wednesday. The Afghans, aged 16 to 43, arrived at New Tokyo International Airport on June 29 aboard a Pakistan International Airlines flight and tried to board a plane for Canada. They were stopped because they lacked proper passports. They have not legally entered Japan, however, and have been detained at the Airport Rest House because the Justice Ministry of Japan does not recognize them as political refu-

A statement issued by the ministry said the seven left India, where they had lived for several years, to escape poverty, not persecution. The ministry has asked Pakistan International Airline to fly them back to New Delhi. The Afghans, however, have refused to leave.

World War II. Prosecutors are to decide within two months whether Barbie is to stand trial on the reduced charges. Mr. Verges's career is studded with spectacular cases, a year's suspension, foreign adventures and attention-grabbing headlines.

He is vehement in his attacks on the establishment. He is articulate on subjects that arouse his passion. He is vague on certain aspects of his past, his relationships with such personalities as Pol Pot, Raymond Barre and Ahmed Ben Bella.

He has been the subject of much speculation and many outrageous ful articles, but he never denies anything said about him.

There is a common point in all of his cases: a systematic attack on the state and the judicial system. And he admits a sympathy with people who are at odds with society and its

"My law is to be against laws," he says in one of his several published works. "My moral is to be against morals."

But why Barbie, who is awaiting trial in Lyon for crimes against humanity stemming from his World War II activities?

"Given the person, not real but mythological, fabricated for political reasons by the government and the media, I think it is the duty of a lawyer to defend him," Mr. Vergès . "I think that an accused has the right to a defense, and not a parody of a defense."

In Mr. Verges's view, Barbie was insignificant, an SS captain who would have remained anonymous were it not for the fact that he was connected with the arrest and death of Jean Moulin, the greatest hero of the French Resistance.

Mr. Vergès believes that Moulin was betrayed by the Resistance itself during internal squabbling. And it is his intention to make the trial a trial of the Resistance.

Mr. Vergès, a twin, was born March 5, 1925, in Ubon, Siam, later Thailand, the son of a French diplomat and a Vietnamese woman.

As Elections Approach, Guatemala Is Troubled By Insurgency, Killings

By Robert J. McCartney

Washington Past Service
GUATEMALA CITY — Political killings by rightists, a stubborn Marxist insurgency and a faltering economy are troubling this country as it heads toward November elections to choose a civilian president to replace the current military gov-

The far right and the far left appear to be using violence to try to provoke the army's leadership into canceling the election in the name of safeguarding the country's secu-rity, according to Guatemalan and foreign observers.

But even skeptics said the nation's top officers seem determined to hand over the presidency to one of the country's civilian politicians for the first time since 1966. The army, which has ruled Gua-temala either directly or from behind the scenes since a U.S.-backed coup in 1954, recognizes that a ci-vilian president would find it easier to obtain increased U.S. aid. The officers are also tired of trying to cope with accelerating inflation and stagnant growth, Guatemalan officials and foreign diplomats

However, the armed forces would continue to exert considerable influence even after General Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores steps down as chief of state, Guatemalan politicians and foreign diplomats said.

The new president will govern with the knowledge that offending the army could lead to a military coup, of which there have been two here in the past three and a half

The Mutual Support Group and church sources suggested that the U.S. figures were incomplete, It did not offer alternative figures.

To some extent, the vigilante squads probably have responded to an increase in leftist-oriented political activism this year, according to a variety of sources. Student associations that describe themselves as progressive have stepped up organizing since late 1984 after lying low for more than a year because of past violence against them, student leaders said The nation's Marxist insurgents, estimated by the army to number about 2,000, are active despite having lost considerable ground to the government since 1981 and 1982. Most of the guerrillas are based in mountains along Guatemala's border with Mexico. The number of wounded received at the capital's military hospital has risen by about 5 percent this year, to an average of about 65 a month, according to an army physician, Major Arnoldo Leal Cruz. While violence has attracted most international attention, the economy is the principal worry of most Guatemalans. The officially recognized inflation rate has quadrupled this year to 16 percent from 3.8 percent in 1984, and diplomats said that a more realistic figure for current in-flation was 60 percent annually. The economic growth rate was exdent in Central America.

Once a purist, always a purist, and this time the designer outdid himself. In his most restrained collection ever, he let the simplicity of his clothes speak for itself. His sense of proportions and subtle palette also elevated this collection to a level all by itself.
This was a silhouette without ex-

There was something for everybody, from dresses draped within an inch of the models' lives to gowns with black velvet tops over long, colorful satin skirts. The Message to Pretoria

South Africa's new state of emergency amounts to martial law and cuts through much recent debate about the country's future. It proves again that a minority of whites cannot enjoy First World prosperity and democracy while pursuing colonial dominion over blacks held in Third World conditions.

Through endless cycles of repression and reform, the white regime has been unable to escape its central dilemma: If the whites refuse to share their wealth and power, they inspire the black majority to revolt; and if they try to suppress rebellion with force, they betray their law and culture and are left with a Second World, Polish-style order.

President P.W. Botha has now provided dramatic evidence for both premises. Although his reforms have been politically trivial, they had the effect of discrediting the central doctrines of apartheid. By vaguely promising to reward the docility of urban blacks, he abandoned the pretense that all were citizens of tribal homelands and mere guests in South Africa. When he then failed to deliver on the promise to consult them about their political future, he invited the violence that now propels him to draconian measures.

The crackdown not only subjects blacks to arbitrary rule by the police and militia, but also sacrifices the ornaments of white democracy. In much of the country blacks can now be dragged from their homes and detained at will. They can be denied free speech and assembly and any role in putative political activity - even garbage collection in segregated towns, And to sustain this order, white newspapers and courts will be repressed. People will disappear without trace; the police and militia will not be answerable in print or in court, and the authorities will be immune to any damage claims that may arise as a result. To be sure, the old order was collapsing. Blacks had begun to use unions to negotiate not just for economic benefits but also for political influence. When the government invoked its already great powers of repression to charge moderate blacks with treason —and to deliver them to a brutal police - the protest became palpably revolutionary.

Blacks began testing their capacity to damage the economy - once with a general strike, other times with local rent strikes and boycotts of white businesses. Simultaneously, radical black youths began murdering black officials and policemen whose duties implied collaboration with the white regime. These attacks, and the counterattacks of the police, claimed more than 500 lives, mostly black, in 10 months. They destroyed black administration in dozens of segregated towns, requiring the authorities to invade militarily to assure distribution of water and electricity.

The resort to martial law has now touched off the next South African debate: whether Mr. Botha went too far or not nearly far enough in his promises of reform. It is a pathetic question because no reform worthy of the name was ever promised, much less tried. Having abandoned apartheid's myth that all blacks were aliens, Mr. Botha substituted only an offer to consult docile blacks of his choosing one day in a "non-statutory forum." To the most moderate possible black leader, Chief Gatsha Buthelezi, this was "a lousy crumb from the white man's table." The message is stark: The First World blessings of democracy and prosperity depend most of all on the consent of the governed. A government dis-daining that consent puts all else in jeopardy. -THE NEW YORK TIMES.

China as Nuclear Partner

With the signing of the U.S.-Chinese nuclear agreement, its text will at last become public. The long delay has ended and the Reagan administration has decided to go ahead with the agreement while President Li Xiannian is in Washington. When it reaches Congress, it is likely to become the focus of a careful examination of the intricate system of rules that try to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons. The agreement would enable China to buy civilian power reactors in America on condition that it gives no assistance to other countries trying to build nuclear weapons.

This agreement was initialed 15 months ago during President Reagan's trip to China, but after his return it slid silently into the deep freeze. The administration has never offered a public explanation, but it appears there were intelligence reports of Chinese technicians working at Kahuta, where Pakistan has been building a uranium enrichment plant with technology stolen a decade ago from a similar facility in the Netherlands. The Chinese then disappeared from the Pakistani nuclear plant, and Beijing repeatedly declared that it does not help other countries to make weapons.

That now presents the United States with a choice. One side of the argument is that China has never offered the kind of detailed and carefully defined assurances that meet American legal standards. The other side is that it is well worth securing even the Chinese style of both nuclear weapons and a good command of nuclear technology - and that had previously been unwilling to offer any pledge at all. Congress can block the agreement by a joint resolution. That is unlikely, but there are two kinds of congressional concern that the admin-istration is going to have to address. A number of senators, most of them Democrats, will press for assurances that the agreement meets the letter of the American nuclear export laws that were enacted to prevent the proliferation of weapons. There are also objections, originating in the Defense Department, that even civilian nuclear technology has, in the Chinese context, military applications. These have less to do with weapons directly than with the development of nuclear power plants for naval ships, particularly submarines.

The administration bears the burden of demonstrating that this agreement, inadequate a year ago, is satisfactory today. That is not an impossible case to make, but the administra tion is going to have to make it openly and forcefully. A lot depends on the precise lan-guage of a text that no one outside the admin-istration has yet seen. But at least potentially there may be important benefits here for controlling the spread of nuclear weapons. Until recently China chose to remain entirely outside the structure of international promises that seek to prevent proliferation. An agree-ment with the United States providing access to certain U.S. technology would provide a

Lame Duck or Fond Monarch?

Four and a half years into the presidency of Ronald Reagan the American public is being abruptly forced to face reality. The vigorous 74-year-old man they re-elected so overwhelmingly last November has descended almost overnight from the peak of his physical and political power. By its failure to confront Mr. Reagan's mortality last November, the nation has lumbered itself with a genuine lame duck. - Alex Brummer in The Guardian (London).

American presidents are not just elected political leaders; they are also in a sense mon-archs. Peoples who have found a leader worthy of their love are loath to lose him. Such figures are not to be discarded lightly.

Ronald Reagan is such a president. That fact makes practical calculations as to whether he will be up to doing this, that or the other somewhat beside the heart of the matter.

- The Sunday Telegraph (London). Moderates Out in South Africa

Having embarked too timidly on the road to reform, President Botha succeeded only in radicalizing extremists. His policy is rejected by the more reactionary wing of the National Party and by the new parties to its right. So he has been compelled, doubtless against his will, to declare a state of emergency.

Moderates in the various factions of the black community, who were ready to play the card of gradual liberalization, have been iso-lated and neutralized. The diehards of the African National Congress, now openly manipulated by the Communist Party, thus have free rein. The way is clear for Marxist subversion to try to knock down a "domino" of prime importance to the free world, given South Africa's strategic position on a vital sea route and its reserves of rare minerals that are indispensable to the arms industries of the West. We can expect the worst. Alas, we can no longer hope for the best.

Although the crime may not have been the result of an organized conspiracy, it must be regarded as the product of the passions excited by the violent agitation being carried on by the Republican and Socialist parties." Washington and Pretoria: Helping Conflict Along

By Joseph Kraft

WASHINGTON — Lyndon
Johnson used to tell a story about a small boy in Texas who spotted two trains heading down the same track from opposite directions. The lad lit out for home. A stranger Asians and "coloreds" persuaded blacks that they were dealing with a "divide and conquer" strategy. Leadstopped him and asked where he was eas turned militant against any corushing. The boy pointed to the distant trains. "I see," the man said, against white rule not only included stopped him and asked where he was rushing. The boy pointed to the distant trains. "I see," the man said, "and you're running for heip."
"No," the boy replied. "I'm running to get my brother. He's never seen a train wreck either."

That story drives home the slightly foolish role played by Washington in strikes, boycotts and demonstrations. There was also a sustained and often violent campaign against blacks foolish role played by Washington in the latest act of the tragedy that is South Africa. A collision between blacks and whites is now wrecking that country. Overambitious efforts to help have left America in the position of confused bystander. The stage for the latest act was set by the government of President P.W. Botha. It came to office professing a program for the hardest thing in politics - reform from above. One feature was to protect the borders against forays from neighboring black states by elements of the African National Congress, which was said to be Communist-dominated. To that end the South African army, and native guernilas it sponsored, made deep raids into Angola and Mozam-bique. At that point the Reagen adnistration stepped in with its policy of "constructive engagement."

Washington promoted accords between South Africa and Angola and Mozambique. In return for an end to the raids, the black African states were supposed to sever ties with the Soviet Union, Cuba and the ANC. But none of the parties could deliver on their promises. The raids from South Africa continued. A month ago, in an acknowledgment of failure, the United States withdrew its am-

Last January the black majority was invited to participate in a "non-statutory forum." The purpose was to promote dialogue and even negotiation on racial conditions. As an added inducement, the government made a major change in the practice of apartheid: The legal re-quirement that blacks living in settled areas be transported to rural reservations was quietly abandoned. The huge black settlements near major white cities were, in effect, accepted. As so often happens with reform programs, the Botha program backfired. The success of the border raids convinced blacks in South A friest that convinced blacks in South Africa that they could not rely on neighboring black states. But there America re-enters the picture. For as "constructive engagement" collapsed and police repres-sion waxed in South Africa, protests by blacks and liberals gathered force in America. In response to that pressure - and to embarrass the Reagan administration - both Houses of Congress have approved economic sanctions against South Africa, But sanctions can only harden the resolu-tion of the regime, while weakening the economic power of the blacks, who need jobs and purchasing power to back up strikes and boycotts.

The sad fact is that the United States has only the most limited ability to influence events in South Africa. Overplaying that weak hand is buy-ing a ticket to watch a catastrophe.

The south African government is concessions only after the thing conceded has ceased to hold even symbolic importance. Negotiations, in fact, may be the way out of the turmoil and injustice in South Africa. The danger is that the government, once again being too clever for its own good, and injustice in South African government, once again being too clever for its own good. once again a day late and a concession short in its drive to forestall the inevitable. The fear is that they will, as has become their sorry custom, do too little too late.

Americans Send Mixed Signals From the Hill

Africa and increasing outrage at home, the U.S. Congress has at last determined to try a more interventionist policy. Taken separately, its provisions — particularly on South Africa—are a courageous departure. Taken together, unfortunately, they send a dangerously mixed signal that is more likely to encourage conflict and repression than to bring about the reform that Congress seeks.

On July 11, in separate actions, the House and Senate voted in opposite directions. The House, determined to support anti-Communist resistance movements around the world, voted to repeal the Clark amendment, which prohibits military intervention in Angola, and to terminate all military and non-emergency economic aid to Mozambique unless that country kicks out its Soviet-bloc military advisers. The Senate followed up with a bill to impose economic sanctions on South Africa.

These steps can seem to put the United States on the side of justice, gents and thus encourages Luanda's

Consider Angola's reaction to the vote on the Clark amendment. Since 1976, when the amendment ended CIA involvement in the Angolan civil war, relations have inched tenuously forward. The United States does not officially recognize Angola, but the Reagan administration has conducted extensive negotiations with Luanda over independence for Namibia and the departure of Cuban troops from Angola, American commercial interests in Angola, particularly in oil and banking, have expanded considerably. But these achievements, and larger U.S. goals, are now at risk. Just two days after the House vote, Ango-la angrily broke off talks on Namibia and Cuban troop withdrawal.

The amendment's repeal makes it harder than ever for the Angolans to send the Cubans home. It revives the threat of U.S. military involvement on the side of anti-government insur-

Congressional action on Mozambique risks a similar reversal. Relations have improved since 1984, when President Samora Machel signed the Nkomati accord with South Africa. He has sought Western aid and technology, encouraged the local private sector and promoted trade with the West — a significant turnaround for a committed Marxist. But now the House seems to be telling him that all this is insufficient: Unless he sends bome foreign military advisers, he will lose U.S. development aid. How will these mixed signals play in Pretoria? It is there that they may do the most damage. South Africans will argue that the sanctions are just a ritual gesture to appease American protesters. Citing the votes against Angola and Mozambique, hard-lin-ers will deny that the sanctions represent an enduring shift in U.S. policy. Mixed signals from America will en-courage South Africans to conclude that, if forced by events, America will choose apartheid rather than Communism for southern Africa.

South Africa's initial response to the sanctions is likely to be iron-fisted defiance of the kind it showed last week in declaring a state of emergency. Calmer reflections on the costs of resisting outside pressures may follow, but unless the contradictions in America's signals are reversed in conference, they can only dilute the effect of an unprecedented bipartisan stand against one of the world's most pernicious oligarchies.

The Charge Can Finally Be Dropped

By Stephen S. Rosenfeld

W ASHINGTON — The ques-tion of whether it was wise and necessary for the United States to use nuclear weapons against an enemy in wartime has always seemed to me cut and dried. Of course it was. The interesting question over the years has been whether, as some believe, the United States dropped the bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki to intimidate an ally in peacetime.

Did Washington mean to initiate "atomic diplomacy" and make the Soviet Union bow to postwar U.S. territorial and political designs? Did America take the leap into the atomic age, in the process killing great numbers of Japanese, primarily to im-press Stalin and advance otherwise unworthy American interests?

On both sides, those who have debated this question have understood what a terrible and indefensible thing that would have been. Among other results, it would have put upon the United States the principal blame for destroying the wartime anti-Hitler al-liance and starting the Cold War.

For exactly this reason the Soviets. playing on the still considerable American feelings of guilt and confusion about the bomb, continue to insist that the United States in 1945 did indeed practice "atomic diplomacy." Just the other day in Geneva, Georgi Arbatov and Andrei Georgi Arbatov and Chartes and Andrei Grant Chartes. ko's son Anatoli renewed the charge that the bombs had been dropped to moress the Kremlin.

I first came upon this accusation in 1965 upon publication of Gar Al-perovitz's "Atomic Diplomacy: Hi-roshima and Potsdam." a provoca-tive revision of the generally benign and then generally accepted view of the decision to use the bomb. Mr. Alperovitz argued that the atomic bomb had determined much of Harry Truman's ostensible shift to a rough anti-Soviet policy in Europe.

In due time scholarly responses were prepared, using materials not available when Mr. Alperovitz was writing. This makes it possible, I believe, to support the simple, square, old-fashioned view that Truman dropped the bomb to win the war, and to support that view not simply on the basis of a distaste for the revisionist blame-America historians of the 1960s and 1970s but on the basis of the historical record.

There was, to be sure, a great flush of excitement when news of an impending bomb first spread. Daniel Yergin recalls Secretary of State James Byrnes saying privately that the first test in New Mexico "had given us great power." Winston Churchill was elated that "we now had something in our hands which would redress the balance with the would rearies the balance with the Russians." Secretary of War Henry Stimson, detecting "a great change ... in my own psychology." thought America had the "master card" to a postwar settlement.

"Most of the Americans who knew about the bomb thought it could be gin writes in "Shattered Peace," "but did not know how." They never learned. Mr. Stimson brimmed with fuzzy thoughts about vast, newly conferred American influence in Asia as well as Europe. But the specific application he came up with was not to wield the bomb as a stick but to offer

Russians would not have it. Averell Harriman, then America's ambassador in Moscow, says that at the crucial pre-Hiroshima Potsdam summit the bomb "never entered the discussions." Flying home from Pots-dam, Charles Bohlen and Llewellyn Thompson, America's top Soviet hands, pondered its possible influence on U.S.-Soviet relations and found no way to bring it to bear.

it to the Russians as a carrot. The Adam Ulam, the Harvard scholar, adds in "Dangerous Relations" that "no one has presented a single piece of evidence showing that the U.S. ever employed its then monopoly of muclear weapons to wrest concessions from the U.S.S.R. And, even more to the point, no one has explained what it was that the American atomic blackmail allegedly prevented the Kremlin from doing." Mr. Ulam offered a footnote to his book in a conversation the other day. The Soviets never brought up the charge that the United States had attempted to use its nuclear monopoly for coercive political purposes, he told me, until the American revisionist historians started writing about it. That is to say, the whole notion of "atomic diplomacy" arose in the first instance not from real Soviet apprehension and not even from Soviet propaganda but from the workings of America's free society.

While women are more susceptible to depression than men, the difference between men and women in rates of depression seems to be detecting and measuring plant responses to environmental conditions.

Possible uses of the Ceres device, named after the Roman goddess of agriculture, include predicting irrigation schedules, evaluating the effectiveness of fertilizers, or determining the impact of pollutants. The device is based on the physiological principle that, as plants are stressed, tiny pores on their leaves, called stomates, open or close.

Opening or closing of the stomates causes a slight change in the diameter of the plant's stem as water is retained or expelled by the plant.

This change is detected by the Ceres device, said Dr. Peter A. Reedlow.

The VHSIC revolution is starting to allow the digital processing of such radio signals very quickly, almost in "real time," or as soon as they are received. Dr. Strull at Wesringhouse said a typical VHSIC goal was to be able to digitally process signals in radar receivers on aircraft, which operate at about 10,000 million hertz. From this moment on...

"Early on the morning of August 6, 1945, the Enola Gay, named for the pilot's mother, cut east to west across the rivers of Hiroshima, opened its hatches, and an atom bomb fell free. From that moment to this, nothing has ever been the same in the world."

So begins the cover story in this week's TIME, Roger Rosenblatt's survey of the forty-year Age of the Atom—an age characterized not by a hero or an idea, but by a weapon and a threat.

The story offers four perspectives on that day's reality: as seen by a Hiroshima schoolboy; by a physicist who observed the mission; by former President Nixon, one of only eight Americans in history with the power to approve the use of nuclear weapons; and by American writers, painters and film-makers whose works assimilate the monstrous possibilities of what surely may be called the age of anxiety.

may be called the age of anxiety.

These diverse views of the influence of the Bomb on peace, war, science, culture, the conduct of life and the survival of conscience, sometimes conflict and sometimes coincide. But as Rosenblatt points out, "Everybody lives in Hiroshima": it is a responsibility that will not go away. This extraordinary article explores the ways people cope with this self-imposed handicap, and even find ways to make it work for the common good.

This is the kind of journalism that attracts to TIME 32 million men and women readers around the world every week.

More goes into it.

WALL STREET WATCH

There May Be Some Life Left in the Old Bull Yet

By EDWARD ROHRBACH

International Herald Tribuni ARIS — Is it any wonder that everybody on Wall Street is taking the pulse of the stock market? After all, it has never labored at this high an altitude before. And now, almost three years after its birth in August of 1982, the boll market is almost exactly at that stage in life when historically prices have started to go downhill:

But there is growing controversy now about just how old and infirm the bull market really is:

"One cannot escape raising the issue of whether a new market cycle began in the summer of 1984," said Leon Cooperman, chairman of the investment policy committee at Goldman Sacht. "The pattern of the past three summers could be

His answer is a "weak no," but that reflects a shift from the firm's long-standing posi-tion that Wall Street is in the late stages of its advance from reversed in 1985." Elaine Garzarelli, director of sector analysis for Shearson Lebman Brothers, has no doubt about her optimistic diagnosis: "This upturn in the stock market is not the second leg but a new bull market." She views last July as a "bear market bottom" to the downturn that began about a year earlier. It was a period when assorted Wall Street indices fell 14 to 32 percent. She notes that in the past 12 months the S&P 500, NYSE, Wilshire and NASDAQ composite are up about 30 percent, with the lagging Dow, Value Line and Amex up about 30 percent, with the lagging Low, value Line and Amex up about 25 percent.

"Although the S&P 500 is now 12 percent above its October 1983 peak, the Amex and NASDAQ are still about 7 to 10 percent below their June 1983 peaks," she pointed out. "The Dow is only 4 percent above its November 1983 peak.

"The 1983-84 bear market was similar to the 1962 and 1966 bear markets, which were associated with economic slowdowns and not recessions," she said, adding that the gain in stock prices from the 1962 bottom was 75 percent before the next bear market and the comparable advance after the 1966 trough was 48

OBERT Farrell, chief market analyst at Merrill Lynch, this week also pronounced that the market was "still in To good shape."

But he thinks the vital signs may be tricky, because "the longer a trend persists without interruption, the greater the probability of some deterioration or the development of a top. Accordingly, the market's pattern of the past three summers — that is, a poor beginning followed by a decisive upturn in August — could be

Eugene Peroni, technical analyst at Bateman Eichler Hill Richards of Los Angeles, also likes the patient's health. "The incremental steps to new highs indicate good technical conditioning that should help to prevent a serious decline over the short run," he said. "This gradual and consistent progress is somewhat in contrast to the market's behavior in the first quarter, but the psychological tone among investors is similar. This is a dull market that breeds doubt among many observers regardless of their sympathies toward either the bullish or bearish sides."

Nobody ever accused the stock market of having a heart, but if it did, it no doubt would be IBM. Byron Wien, head of U.S. portfolio strategy for Morgan Stanley, makes that point in noting that Big Blue's appetite is so voracious it adds sales every year the equivalent of a company the size of Digital Equipment. Yet IBM has been off its feed in 1985 and he observed, and "Some observers are using this disappointment to explain the confusing behavior of the whole stock market." behavior of the whole stock market."

Even if IBM is currently feeling a little under its bellwether rocky shift from an earnings-driven stock market to one in which (Continued on Page 15, Col. 2)

Brazil Criticizes Creditors

Brazil would honor its commit-ments and has no wish to create an impasse with creditors, he said, but it was time they realized that the country was powerful enough to look after its own interests.

"We won't allow the dogmatic transigence of international financial organizations to force an unnecessary recession on us," said Mr. Sarney, alluding to the IMF.

Mr. Samey's more-belligerent stance came as Brazil and its creditors were again involved in negotiations after a six-month delay while the government changed.

The DMF is considering whether a recent $6.5-billion package of public spending cuts and success against inflation, now forecast at 140 percent instead of 250 percent, are sufficient grounds for restarting the flow of cash to Brazil.

Mr. Samey attacked "exorbitant interest rates which we have to suffocate our economy to repay" and nsisted on a steady increase in spending on urgent programs for health, education and housing.

Huang Wenjun, a spokesman for the ministry, attributed the decline in export value to falling interna-tional prices for corn, peanuts, soy-appliances rose sharply, but he gave no breakdown.

Imports from Japan rose 102 percent to $5.23 billion, but exports rose only 11 percent to $2.94 billion. Imports from Hong Kong rose 261 percent to $2.25 billion, while exports fell 24.7 percent to $2.03 billion.

Mr. Huang said foreign trade for all of 1985 would be more than the $49.97 billion recorded last year, but declined to make a forecast or to say whether the trade deficit would also increase. China had a $1.1 billion deficit in 1984.

International prices for China's farm commodity exports started rising in June and total export carnings in the second half of 1985 will be higher than in the first half, Mr. Huang said. China will continue to import materials and equipment needed for its modernization programs, but has put tight controls on im-ports of televisions, refrigerators, tape recorders, other domestic ap-pliances and vehicles.

Argentine Executives Try to Adapt To Business Life Without Inflation

By Lydia Chavez

New York Times Service

BUENOS AIRES — For Mario L. Piñeiro, a 64year-old Argentine executive, the prospect of liv-ing in a world without inflation is both attractive and unsettling.

Mr. Piñeiro, who manages the household-products company of Alejandro Llauro & Sons, favors a stable economy. But after years of adjusting his business practices to acute inflation, he and other executives have come to think of such stability as a dusty textbook concep

If President Raul Alfonsin's anti-inflationary program works, rampant inflation will disappear and Argentine businessmen's carefully honed survival skills will become obsolete.

"Most of the people who work here are younger, and their only knowledge of how to manage in a stable economy comes from books." Mr. Piñeiro said recently.

"Even I have forgotten," he said. "We're going to have to adopt and think in a more rational way. In inflation you are always attentive to momentary opportunities. Now things will work more logically."

So adept had Mr. Piñeiro become at managing Alejandro Llauro & Sons that there was still money to be made with inflation at 30 percent a year, he said. But running the company, which has sales of about $24 million a year, became increasingly difficult as inflation crept up, reaching a record 1,129 percent in the 12 months ended June 30.

During the years of inflation, such concerns as production costs took a back seat while managers iocused on the more imminent workers of timing rises in prices - trying to match the cost of raw materials with the cost of the final product. As supply and product costs began going up almost daily, the mixing and matching of those prices became as complicated as solving a Rubik's Cube.

"It was impossible to act on opportunities," Mr. Piñeiro said, "No one had any time because everything hypergened so fast."

thing happened so fast."

So much management time was spent on these calculations—Alejandro Llauro & Sons employed four money managers for the task—that business executives could not worry about equipment failures that were also increasing production costs.

Toyota: Why It Made Its U.S. Move

Washington Post Service $10.2 billion, versus Honna's $10.2 billion.

WASHINGTON — Toyota Mo: Honda's 1984 U.S. sales perfortor Corp. has finally accepted an imance surpassed Japan's No. 2-axiom of the auto business: You scanled Nissan Motor Co., which can't become a world antomotive 3008 485,298 passenger cars in the power unless you build cars in the United States last year. Nissan United States panies, Toyota has been the most timid in establishing a manufactur-ing presence in the United States.

Toyota's past reluctance to enter the United States on its own as a manufacturer is understandable, analysis said. Even with "voluntary quotas" limiting the shipment of Japanese cars to the United States, Toyota sold 557,979 cars and trucks in the United States last year, more than any Japanese or other foreign automaker doing business in the U.S. market.

With Japan's per-car production costs being $2,000 less than those of American rivals, Toyota's sales in the United States provided the single largest source of income for Toyota, analysts said.

But Toyota's joy ride began run-ning into bumps in 1982, the year when Honda Motor Co., Japan's third-largest car company in terms of sales, began assembling Honda Accord sedans in Marysville, Obio. Toyota at first seemed to ignore Honda's U.S. manufacturing efforts. But Honda last year com-bined imports with its Americanmade cars to sell 508,240 units in the United States, only 49,559 units less than Toyota's U.S. sales in

Toyota last year controlled 46 percent of its home market, versus Honda's relatively skimpy 9 percent market share in Japan, Toyotaled $23 billion, versus Honda's strongly that it intends to operate as a world auto power," said Arvid Jouppi of Arvid Jouppi Associates Inc., a Detroit-based marketing analysis firm.

Toyota and other Japanese auto makers also believe that they "will always face some kind of quotas" exporting cars to the U.S. market, said David Healy, an analyst with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. U.S.

took that talk scriously. They said that Toyota simply would follow Honda's example and use U.S. built cars to get around import quotes and to maintain its position in the world's largest, most lucra-tive and most open automotive ba-zaar, the United States.

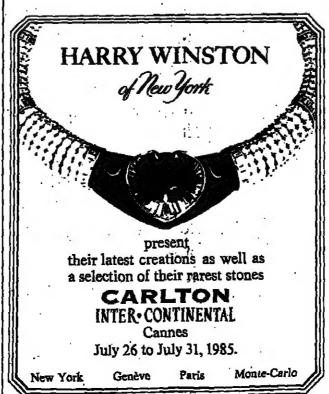

Toyota took a tentative step in that direction late last year when it began with General Motors Corp. in Fremont, California. Initial pro-duction at the joint-venture company, New United Motor Manufacturing Inc., was insignificant in terms of numbers. But analysts expect the plant to turn out 30,000 passenger cars in 1985 and to in-muslly by 1988.

Most of the Fremont plant cars will be assembled for GM's Chev-rolet Division. The remainder, about 50,000, will be built specifically for Toyota. Nissan, Mazda Motor Corp. and Mitsubishi Motors Corp. also are following Honda's example. Japa-nese auto makers as a group could wind up assembling up to 900,000 cars a year in the United States by 1990, according to analysts.

Toyota's decision to start its own assembly operation "recognizes the fact that it can't afford to lose its grip on this auto market and says

He said reduced selling prices for refined petroleum products com-bined with higher production costs and exploration expenses to re-

For the first half Shell earned $633 million, down from $743 mil-tion in the first six months last year. Revenues were down 4.4 percent to

OPEC Stalled In Debate on Minor Cuts

By Bob Hagerty
International Herald Tribune
GENEVA — Oil ministers from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on Wednesday continued their efforts to reach a compromise over minor price cuts. A senior delegate said the minis-ters, in the third day of a meeting here, were considering at least two proposals. One would involve reducing the official price of heavier crudes by about 50 cents. A second would involve a smaller reduction on heavies combined with a minor increase on light varieties.

Iran's minister, Mohammad Gharazi, said he favored the latter approach. Saudi Arabia and Kuait have been secking a reduction in the price of heavy crudes. Both produce heavy oil and wish to price it more competitively in relation to the more-expensive light crudes.

Several countries, notably Libya, Algeria and the United Arab Emir-ates, have argued for no change, even though most OPEC oil is being sold at market-related rates $2 or $3 lower than official prices. A former senior OPEC delegate commented, "It's a shame they are spending so much time" on minor price adjustments. "They should be doing other things," he said.

On Monday, the ministers agreed to delay until anumn discussion on the contentious issue of how to deal with several members' requests for higher output quotas. Dow Average Continues Slide

NEW YORK — Prices on the New York Stock Exchange posted a broad loss Wednesday in a carryover of selling from late in Tuesday's session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 5.83 on Tuesday, dropped 9.63 to 1,342.18 an hour before the close.

Although prices in tables on these pages are from the 4 P.M. close in New York, for time reasons, this article is based on the market at 3 P.M.

Losers outnumbered gainers by nearly 3 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market had come a long way in a short time in its rally over the past two and a half months. The temptation to cash in some profits, they ling off of the bond market after a sharp decline in interest rates.

Rates were little changed in the credit markets Wednesday. There are widespread doubts in the financial world that they will go much lower in the near future.

For the stock market's raily to continue, many analysts believe, the economy will have to fulfill hopes for a resumption of steady growth, boosting corporate earnings.

DuPont dropped ¼ to 60. The company reported second-quarter profits of $1.10 a share, down from $1.81 in the comparable period last year.

The NYSE's composite index fell 1.12 to 110.57. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 1.67 at 233.48.

Volume on the Big Board came to 104.96 million shares with an hour to go.

Steel Production in U.S. Off Sharply in First Half

Crude steel output in the 30 countries covered by the institute's figures totaled 220 million tons in the half year, down 1 percent from the first half of 1984.

Last week the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development said leading steel producers in the West and Japan were heading for a renewed squeeze in the second heading for a renewed squeeze in the second half of 1985. It warned of falling prices, demand and output and rising competition

U.K. Shipbuilders Reports Decline in Annual Revenues

LONDON - British Shipbuilders reported Wednesday that its revenues fell 2.4 percent to £865.9 million (about $1.2 billion) from £886.8 million in the year ended

A spokesman for the stateowned company said losses for the year, including £27.56 million in extraordinary items, fell to £106.8 million from £232 million the year before. He said trading losses de-clined to £25.2 million from £160.9

Graham Day, the chairman, said the company's financial perfor-mance should continue to improve despite current depressed ship prices and despite a lack of significant improvement in world demand for new merchant ships.

Mr. Day said that despite progress in many areas, British Shipbuilders would continue to operate in difficult circumstances. In a market where Far East shipbuilders persist in selling and financing sales on terms which do not cover costs, let alone provide profit, En-ropean shipbuilders, their employees and governments inevitably pay the price," he said.

"Unless more responsible policles are adopted in South Korea and Japan it is difficult to see how any European shipyard can main-tain its capacity," he added.

The study is part of a broad review of deregulation in the aviation industry following a U.S.-Japan agreement on April 30, which ended JAL's monopoly of Japan's international air freight services and allowed the Japanese freight line, Nippon Cargo Airlines, to provide trans-Pacific services.

The agreement also provides for more passenger services be-tween Japan and Micronesia and across the Pacific, and sug-gests that Japan's two domestic airlines, All Nippon Airways Ltd. and Toa Domestic Airlines Ltd., be allowed to start international services, industry sources said.

Trade Ministers To Discuss Tariffs For Third World

NEW DELHI — Trade ministers from developing nations meeting here are expected to set a timetable establishing a global system of tariff preferences for poorer nations by May 1987, trade officials said Wednesday.

The ministers attending the two-day meeting, which begins Thursday, are also expected to agree on setting up a legal framework for the system by October to ease trade barriers among

Group of 77 members, they said.

The conference, which follows three days of talks by trade officials, is likely to adopt a resolution urging developed nations to end pro-tectionism, they added. The trade officials said the system will call on developing states to ease tariff barriers to promote exchanges among them, especially joint ventures and long-term agreements. Under the proposed rules, the least-deve-loped nations will be allowed to maintain existing tariffs and the rules will not override regional trade agreements. The resolution calling for action by industri-alized states on protectionism also urges them to reform the monetary system and cut interest rates to ease Third World debt.

IF YOU CAN TELL US EXACTLY WHAT THESE WILL BE WORTH IN SIX MONTHS TIME,

YOU MAY NOT NEED OUR OPTIONS.

Only last year the Chicago Mercantile Exchange launched its options on the Deutschemark and it quickly became the most actively exchange-traded currency option in the world.

And now, with CME's latest options on the British Pound and Swiss Franc, together with an interest rate option on the Eurodollar, corporate treasures, bankers and dealers have even greater flexibility in managing rate uncertainty.

Corporate treasurers use CME options as "insurance policies" against future rate fluctuations in hedging strategies, tender or takeover situations and as an insulation against translation exposures.

Leading banks, institutions and government dealers use CME options as an essential dealing and arbitrage tool to lay off foreign currency and interest rate risk. The high volume of CME options and the tight pricing which arises from the link between our options and futures contracts has enabled our customers to benefit from an improved and even more sophisticated service.

THE AWAKENING TWENTIES: A Memoir-History of a Literary Period

By Gorham Munson. 317 pages. $19.95. Louisiana State University Press, Baton Rouge, Louisiana 70893.

Reviewed by Jonathan Yardley

N THE literary landscape of the 1920s Gorham Munson was a distinctly minor figure, though you certainly couldn't tell that to Gorham Munson. He was an energetic, opinionated fellow who basked in the glow of more consequential figures but emitted relatively little light of his own; the books he published are lost in the shelves, the causes and fancies he espoused have long since been forgotten. At the time of his death in 1969 he had completed what he called "a book of related essays on subjects that were formative of the literary period known as the Twenties in America." If you are wondering why it took a decade and a half for the book to see the light of day, the book itself provides the answer

"The Awakening Twenties" is actually two books, and that is its problem. The first is a relatively objective history of U. S. literary and cultural life in the years immediately preceding the artistic explosion of the '20s, and of the first five years of the '20s themselves; there is a great deal of useful material, much of it serving to remind us of people who played important roles before vanishing from memory.

The second is a memoir of sorts in which Munson attempts to demonstrate the high regard in which he was held by others more eminent than he, and in which he goes on at interminable length about his infatuation with the teachings of the mystic G. I. Gurdjieff. In the first half Minison writes with evident

In the first half Minson writes with evident and rather pleasing emotion about the coming of peace in 1918 and, with it, the sense that the young had been freed to follow what they saw as their destiny: "They were conscious of themselves as a generation in revolt against the Genteel Tradition of American letters. They saw themselves as the young generation, les jeunes, the moulders of the future. They were aware that a new period was starting with aware that a new period was starting with them, and very soon they voiced this awareness. Just as there was a young France, a young Ireland, a young Spain, so there was a young America emerging from the bankruptcy of man's political hopes at Versailles and launching a revival in literature and the arts."

Munson is at pains to point out, though, that the manufacture is a did not exercise in full the revolution of the '20s did not emerge in full bloom but was the result of a shifting in the American artistic ground that can be traced to the Armory Show of 1913 in New York, at which the showing of Marcel Duchamp's "Nude Descending a Staircase" and other Modernist paintings announced the coming of

Among the prewar influences on this process

Munson singles out several little magazines, notably Others, Seven Arts and The Soil, this last the creation of the long-forgotten Robert J. Coady, who "looked for an indigenous life, for an indigenous art, for the possibilities of an indigenous art," and whose influence on ber-ter-known publications of the '20s seems to have been significant. Munson pays his respecis to Randolph Bourne, the editor and produce a new art and a new literature.

There were also books, more and more of them issued by "some five or six young publishers, who would ultimately rejuvenate the whole industry"; these firms "welcomed the new realists, the new critical voices, the new poets — and thereby became partners in the creation of a period. In addition to the established firm of Scribner's, revitalized by Maxwell Perkins, there were new firms that quickly came to have an incalculable influence; Alfred A. Knopf, Boni & Liveright, B. W. Huebsch, Harcourt, Brace & Howe. Munson accurately sesses their importance.

At this moment, unfortunately, "The Awak-ening Twenties" veers off into self-serving per-sonal reminiscence. A long chapter about Hart Crane exists primarily to demonstrate Munson's highly suspect theory that the poet's sudden decline can be traced to a crisis follow-ing an exposure to Gurdjieff and his Institute for the Harmonious Development of Man. A chapter on Munson's relationship with Robert Frost, such as it was, is pointless, and a chapter on his nonexistent but devoutly wished-for relationship with Charlie Chaplin is embarrassing. As for the chapter on Gurdjieff and his disciple A. R. Orage, its main effect is to leave one wondering how someone of Munson's intelligence not merely could be attracted to this twaddle as a young man but could remain dazzled by it as an old man.

Manuscript of Petrarch Poem Found in East German Library

United Press International BERLIN — A 14th-century manuscript of a poem by Petrarch has been found in the Research Library of Gotha in East Germany.

The offical news agency, ADN, said the 142-verse Latin manuscript, from the collection of the dukes of Sachsen-Gotha, recorded a poem that Petrarch declaimed in 1341, when he was given his poet's laurels in Rome.

Women Beginning to Blend In With the Globetrotters' Weave By Barry Jacobs New York Tunes Service

CHARLOTTE, North Carolina -- Gradually, litfully, the three women moving near the top of the key nastered the basics of the figure-8 weave.

Soon they were floating smoothly before Coach Larry (Gator) Rivers, stationed by the foul line, and lo and behold, as he interspersed passing the basket-ball with making it undulate around his body to the strains of Brother Bones's version of "Sweet Georgia Brown," a bit of Harlem Globetrotter magic materialized in the steamy Charlotte Coliscum.

Watching and awaiting their turns to try the rou-tine, 15 other women cheered and applauded.

Rivers said the weave, a warm-up drill, is "the rhythm section, the area that sets the tempo" for the Globetrotters' ballhandling wizardry and comic flair, which annually attract 1.2 million customers to arenas

But business has been suffering recently. Some of the exhibition team's comic sets have grown stale, according to the the team's president, Paul Duryea, Meanwhile, more and more professional and college players display dazzling dexterity, diluting the Globe-trotters' appeal. "If we had continued in the same fashion," said Duryea, "we probably would have been out of business in a few years."

Then came the 1984 Olympics and a gold medal for the U.S. women's baskerball team. After taking over management of the Globetrotters earlier this year, Duryea set out to add at least one woman to the team. After the Charlotte tryont, which ended Wednes-day, six to eight women will be invited to attend the Giobetrotter veteran's camp beginning Sept. 30.

There, two women will probably be selected to become Trotters. The show's 60th season begins 17 days later in Brisbane, Australia.

Rivers, the player-coach, is seeking women who are skilled perimeter players with good hands and quick reflexes. "I've seen some girls who are going to give our guys fits," said Rivers after one day's ballhandling drills and full-court scrimmages.

The first-year coach admitted surprise at the intensity and purch play but guard Sandra Hudge said that cia's two-run double capped a sity and rough play, but guard Sandra Hodge said that three-run eighth that put the Blue was nothing new. In fact, she said, such ignorance of women's play underlines the importance of the Globetrotter opportunity.

"I think having a woman on the team could be a big thing — the recognition we get now is really poor," said Hodge, who averaged 26.7 points a game at the University of New Orleans, the highest career average in women's National Collegiate Athletic Association history, and played professionally in Sweden last year. "You have so many women who finish college who are really good but have no place to go in this country."

Recognition was suitably plentiful at the tryout sessions in Charlotte. Before and after each two-hour workout, and during brief rest breaks, reporters swarmed around Rivers and the more renowned women, such as the Olympic captain Lynette Woodard and Pam and Paula McGee, who were two-time NCAA champions at Southern Cal.

Early speculation had the McGee twins and Woo-

Others who have impressed are Hodge, a flashy, slender shooting whiz, and the stocky, aggressive play-maker Joyce Walker, a three-time all-America at Louisiana State from 1981 to 1984.

"This is like a dream to me," said North Carolina State's Linda Page, echoing a constant theme among the women during the tryouts. Said Woodard: "I'm in basketball heaven

But once they make the team, women can expect less dreamlike conditions. The State Department has warned Duryea that semale players may be barred from the court when the overseas tour reaches Saudi Arabia, and perhaps other Middle Eastern countries.

Then 100 there will be the burden of representing women's basketball, the glare of public scrutiny and long days of travel in a male-dominated entourage.

Marino Seeking Fatter Contract

By Michael Janofsky New York Times Service

NEW YORK - Dan Marino, the Minni Dolphin quarterback, reluctantly began training camp this week. Marino wants a new contract, something Joe Robbie, the team's owner, had promised him in January, during the week before the National Football League's Su-

But so far, Robbie has not engaged Marino's attorney, Marvin Demoff, in any substantive negotiations. Marino had considered staying out of camp, but agreed last weekend to report - with the un-derstanding that Robbie would meet with Demoff this week.

As a rookie in 1983, Marino signed a four-year contract, worth approximately $2 million. He is looking for a package that would look in the look in pay him about the same as Joe in 1983. The only caveat as far as Montana, the quarterback of the Hunter is concerned is his health. The possibility that Anthony Carter of the Oakland Invaders might join the Miami Dolphins staggers the imagination Attor-neys for Carter are investigating how to free him from his obligation to the United States Football League team. He was a Dolphin draft choice in 1983; Carter, Mark Duper and Mark Clayton are all about the same size, under 5-10, and each has blazing speed. Throw in Nat Moore, the wise old receiver who had one of his best years ever last season, and the Dolphins have the capability of using formations with four wide receivers and no tight ends. Most defenses won't have enough agile backs to cover all of them at once.

Colt Sets $13.1-Million Auction Mark

LEXINGTON, Kentucky (AP) — A son of Nijinsky II was sold for $13.1 million at the Keeneland yearing sales here Tuesday night, shattering the world record for a thoroughbred horse sold at public auction.

The bay colt, owned by Warner Jones Jr., was purchased by BBA-England on behalf of Robert Sangster, the English soccer-pool magnate.

The previous record, $10.2 million, was paid in 1983 by Sangster's Astronomy Inthorough Stud for a cold by 1064 Kentucky Debry winner Northern Upthorpe Stud for a colt by 1964 Kentucky Debry winner Northern Dancer out of the mare My Bupers.

The record-setter's dam is My Charmer, making him a half-brother to Triple Crown winner Scattle Slew. Nijinsky II, also a son of Northern Dancer, is a former European horse of the year and the sire of more than 80 stakes winners, among them Golden Fleece, the champion 3-year-old in England and Ireland.

IRS Seizes Property of NFL's Dorsett

DALLAS (AP) — Two houses belonging to Dallas Cowboy running back Tony Dorsett were seized Tuesday night in an effort to collect more than $400,000 in back taxes, according to the Internal Revenue Service. The houses could be sold within 30 days if tax debts allegedly owed for 1979, 1980 and 1983 are not satisfied, said Marlene Gaysek, an IRS spokeswoman. She said the sales would satisfy the IRS liabilities, but that the National Football League player has 180 days from the date of any sale to pay the taxes and reclaim his property.

Apart from the tax liens, Dorsett was named in a civil lawsuit filed June 25 by First City Bank of Richardson (Texas), alleging that he had failed to pay a $175,000 unsecured note signed in March. State district court records indicated Dorsett had not responded to the suit as of late Tuesday.

By Christine Chapman TOKYO — "We were beyond hatred. We didn't feel anymore. I believed we were completely destroyed," Masuji Ibuse said of the bombing of Hiroshima. "It seemed so hopeless."

Ibuse is the author of the novel "Kuroi Ame" ("Black Rain"), a 20th-century masterpiece about the survivors of Hiroshima. The English novelist C. P. Snow once said: "Here is a novel by an elderly Japanese writer which turns into a major work of art. . . . I don't like throwing words like 'masterpiece' about, but if I were thinking of, say, 10 novels of high class written in the last 25 years. I think I should include this one."

At 87, Ibuse is a revered sensei, or master, of Japanese literature. He has been writing novels, short stories, poetry and essays for more than 65 years. For his stories of rural Japanese, he is loved and honored by his countrymen. For "Black Rain," published in 1965, he is acclaimed throughout the world. Translated into at least a dozen languages, "Black Rain" evokes the moments and days immediately following the dropping of the atomic bomb on Hiroshima, reconstructing how the people reacted. Ibuse re-creates the experiences of the Shizuma family, and their friends and neighbors who lived in or near the city, using diaries that flash back to scenes of ordinary life and extraordinary

Robert Jay Lifton, the American psychiatrist who wrote the 1967 study of atomic bomb victims, "Death in Life: Survivors of Hiroshima," called "Black Rain" "a highly superior novel by a dis-tinguished writer." While Lifton qualified its impact for him because of certain "scientific and medical inaccuracies," he praised the power of its "psychic truths" about "the pained wisdom of the 20th-century survivor."

A survivor is what Ibuse is -- of the great earthquake of 1923, when he sat, badly frightened, in a field as Tokyo was destroyed; of a wartime government assignment as an unwilling reporter in South-east Asia; of American air raids on Japan. Upon returning to To-kyo from Singapore in 1942, Ibuse

Ibuse calls Fukuyama, 100 miles (160 kilometers) from Hiroshima, his hometown. He was born Feb. 15, 1898, in a village in Hiroshima prefecture, the second son of landowning farmers. Although he has spent most of his life in Tokyo, where he went in 1917 to enter university, Ibuse was in Fukuyama on Aug. 6, 1945, when refugees from Hiroshima arrived in trucks escaping from the devastated city. Horrified by their condition. Ibuse wrote a short story about them in 1951, then "Black Rain," whose descriptions of victims alive and dead reveal what he saw in Fukuyama. "I didn't want to write about it right after the war," he said at his home in Tokyo. He had just finished the nap he sometimes takes in the afternoon if he gets up early in the morning, to work on a new edition of his collected writings. "Only gradually did I begin it with a story titled The Marriage of My Niece.' Then I began to think of writing more details about the bomb and the people."

in the novel, the hoped-for marriage of Yasuko, the country niece who lives with her city relatives, is the dominant story line as Ibuse contrasts traditional life with a scientifically altered new world. Though she was safe at work during the attack, Yasuko was marked by the black rain that fell on Hiroshima after the bombing. The rain was black because of dirt blown into it from the blast, and considered lethal because of radiation. (Lifton wrote that Ibuse's belief in the deadliness of the black rain was his main inaccuracy: "Most authorities believe that there was no medically significant level" of residual radiation.)

Yasuko develops the leukemia-like A-bomb disease. An arranged marriage for her becomes impos-sible. Her uncle, Shigematsu Shizuma, badly burned, tries to un-derstand the catastrophe by writing a "Journal of the Bomb-ing," in which he records details of daily existence amid the chaos.

Going into Hiroshima on Aug. 10 four days after the bombing, with orders to buy coal for his company, Shizuma carries with him a bundle of essentials. "It was full of things necessary for survival amidst the ruins: a bottle containing stomach pills, a trowel, old magazines, cucalyptus leaves, dried rusks, a round paper fan, and the like." Shizuma only slowly becomes aware of the futility of his assignment in a city that has been turned to carbon, and of the inadequacy of his provisions.

A 10-volume collection of Ibuse's work will be published in the fall by Shinchosha Co. of Tokyo. One of the novels to be in-cluded is "Black Rain." At first Ibuse was reluctant to talk about the book - was reluctant, he says, even to read it again to make minor revisions for the collection.

"I aimed to make a documentary." In composing the novel, he used the diary of a neighbor and fishing friend from Fukuyama as well as records from city offices and other documents. The name of his fishing companion was Shizuma Shipematsu, the reverse of the name used in the novel. Shigematsu's niece was indeed named Yasuko and his wife Shigeko; they also kept diaries, the niece recording the progress of her disease, the wife describing what they are dur-ing the war. The family asked

But after the tea and whiskey give way to a Japanese feast and more whiskey, he started telling stories about Tokyo before the 1923 earthquake, of beloved friends and writers (now dead) such as Osamu Dazai and Naoya Shiga, of his lack of success in the 1920s as an editor for a now-defunct publishing company, of the two loaves of black bread that his Russian publishers sent him, at his request, instead of royalties.

He complained, though, that "Tve lived too long —these days I can't write poems." He also said that though for most of his life he has been an avid fisherman, he no longer fishes; nor, he said, does he paint - 20 years ago he did stud-

In 1918 he wrote the first version of "The Salamander," a satire on intellectual pretense that is still his most popular story in Japan. He quarreled with a pro-fessor and left the university after his second year. After surviving the 1923 earthquake, but not his editorial job, he refused to join the leftist movement, taking a different path from many writers in the late 1920s. In 1937, when Japan's national-
